CITRUS HEIGHTS, Calif. — Citrus Heights Water District (CHWD) recently began constructing two new groundwater wells to improve water reliability for the community and reduce reliance on Folsom Lake during dry years.

The project is supported by more than $6.6 million in external funding, including over $2 million in Community Project Funding championed by Congressman Ami Bera, as well as grant funding through the Regional Water Authority and the State.

“These new wells are more than an infrastructure upgrade—they’re a smart investment in public health and economic security,” said Congressman Ami Bera, M.D. “I was proud to help secure federal funding for this project, and I’ll continue working to support CHWD’s efforts to deliver reliable and sustainable water supply for families and businesses in Citrus Heights.”

The wells will include aquifer storage and recovery technology, a forward-thinking approach that allows CHWD to inject water underground during wet years and pump it out when needed. This flexibility not only supports CHWD customers—it contributes to the health of the region’s shared water supply and increases resilience across the Sacramento region.

“This is a regional win,” said Brett Ewart, Board Chair of the Regional Water Authority. “By investing in aquifer storage and recovery, we’re moving closer to a true regional water bank that helps balance supplies, manage costs, and strengthen our response to dry periods.”

Construction of Wells #7 and #8 are underway. Both are part of CHWD’s broader Groundwater Expansion and Reinvestment Program.

“These wells are part of CHWD’s commitment to safe, reliable, and affordable water service,” said Ray Riehle, President of the CHWD Board of Directors. “We should all be proud of this investment for our community and future generations. We’re committed to planning ahead, applying for grants, and making smart investments—so our customers always receive high-quality water. These wells represent our mission in action.”
